BETTY COMDEN and ADOLPH GREEN

Recipients of the
MUSICAL THEATRE SOCIETY
AWARD OF DISTINCTION
SPRING, 1976

Betty Comden and Adolph Green have a tremendous record of achievement in Theatre and Motion Pictures. They are both enormously successful writers of musical comedy books, lyrics, and screen plays.

On Broadway, their writing credits include books and lyrics for On the Town, Billion Dollar Baby, Two on the Aisle, Bells Are Ringing, Subways Are For Sleeping, Fade Out, Fade In, Hallelujah Baby, Applause(book), and lyrics for Wonderful Town, Peter Pan, and Do Re Mi. Among the films they have written are Singing in the Rain, The Bandwagon, On the Town, Take Me Out to the Ball Game, Good News, The Barkleys of Broadway, It's Always Fair Weather, Auntie Mame, and What a Way to Go.

They've won three Tony Awards, four Screen Writers Guild Awards, and two Oscar nominations.

Their professional careers began as performers-writers with Judy Holliday in a satirical act called The Revuers, presented at the Village Vanguard. They made their first Broadway appearance in the original On the Town(1944), playing the roles of Claire and Ozzie, and some years later appeared in A Party, their one-man-one-woman show, performing material from their shows and films.

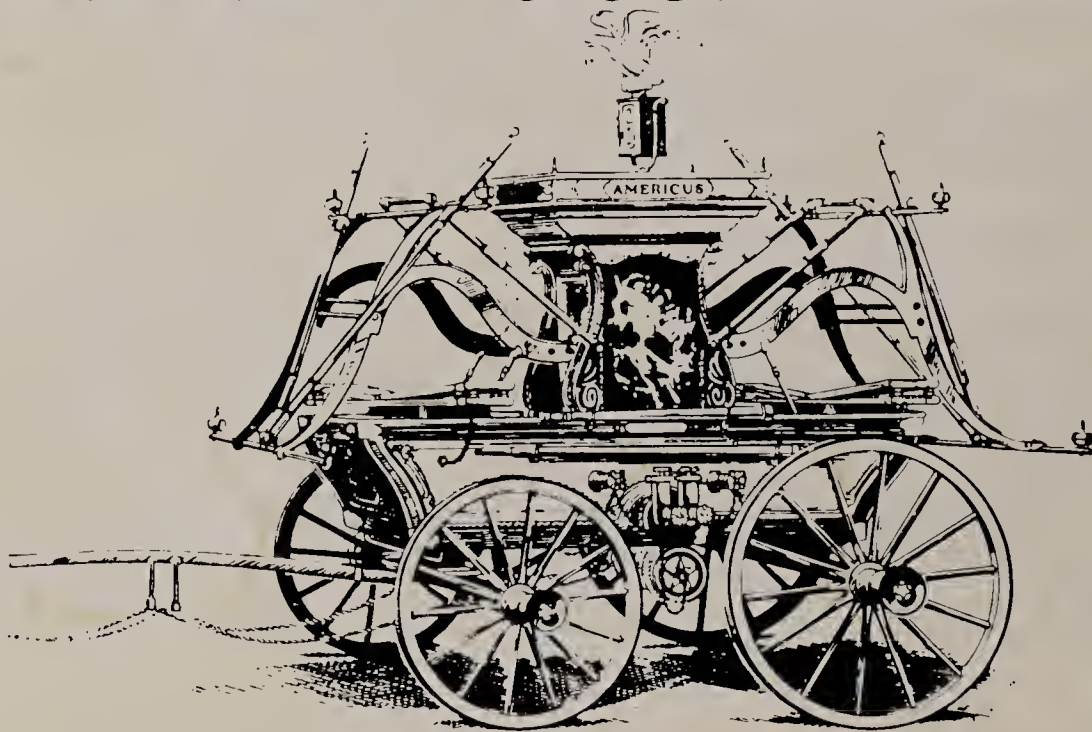

The private lives of this prolific pair go separate ways, except that they see each other socially. Miss Comden is married to Steven Kyle and is the mother of two children. Mr. Green is married to actress Phyllis Newman. The Greens also have two children.
